

Omar Mitchell – Sustainable Infrastructure & Growth Initiatives – National Hockey League (NHL)

Omar Mitchell, Sustainable Infrastructure & Growth Initiatives at National Hockey League (NHL) is responsible for strategies that grow youth sport participation and hockey fandom through physical infrastructure – by exploring business models and innovations that address economic, social and environmental sustainability within such infrastructure to ultimately create vibrant and healthy communities. He started his career in architecture and real estate and holds an M.B.A. from MIT's Sloan School of Management; a master's degree in architecture from Columbia University in the City of New York; and is a lifelong University of Florida Gator